The Galilean School of Higher Education is an offshoot of Padova University, which offers a selected group of students multidisciplinary courses, seminars, individual tutorials and academic research experiences. Besides, it provides free-of-charge accommodation, college life and dedicated services both in the city and at the University of Padova. The students attend the regular courses and activities of their chosen Programme at Padova University, and in addition they must attend the didactical activities given at the Galilean School. After obtaining their Master's degree at Padova University, they write an additional, final Galilean dissertation in order to receive the Galilean Diploma. The Galilean School admits every year only 30 new students in all scientific disciplines, after a very selective procedure, including both written and oral examinations. The Galilean Diploma is equivalent to a second-level master's degree (see Ministerial Decree No. 1093 of September 23rd 2021).
